BLOCKCHAIN & DISTRIBUTED TECHNOLOGY

Blockchain has been present for years, since 1970s, however the latest development of the Cryptographic hashes, used in Bitcoin, provided the facility to provide a more widespread applications, not only in crypto currency, but also for secure enterprise B2B solutions, at scale.

Using Cryptographic Hashes, a ledger using the Blockchain concept is stored on a distributed network, whose transactions cannot be deleted or tampered with (immutable). There is business logic also stored on the ledger which can be automatically executed, provided the conditions are met. It is a secure tamper-proof mechanism with time stamped cryptographic hashes to provide authentic, trusted governance to systems on a peer-to-peer basis.

6

CULTURE CHANGE PROGRAMME

Senior leaders often create culture by their presence and authority and this culture sets the pattern and tone for all those who lead, whether formally or informally, within an organisation. Many business leaders confirm the belief that a strong organisational culture is critical to success. Yet like a wet soap bar in a bathtub, the thing we label as culture, whether it pertains to a team, a business unit or a whole organisation, can be elusive, always slipping just out of reach every time we try to grasp it.

EQUALITY, DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION IMPROVEMENT

Extensive research has been carried out by 1000s of companies, discussing the correlation between the improved performance of an organisation and its Diversity. Whilst the percentages might vary a little, the overwhelmingly positive findings don't. There is widely published research about the numerous, direct and indirect business benefits achieved by being a Diverse organisation, such as increased productivity, performance, innovation and profit.

8

LEADING WITH CARE

There is no one-size-fits-all approach to being a good leader, whether good-effective or good-ethical. Although we tend to judge our leaders in very black or white terms - as villains or heroes - in reality, leadership is a much more complex and contested grey. The solutions that work for technical processes and systems are therefore not always the most effective for the uniquely human elements of leadership. The evidence suggests that organisations thrive when their leaders show compassion, exhibit respect for others and have a strong moral compass - in short, when they demonstrate that they care. This is shown consistently in the benchmark metrics of human performance, retention, engagement and well-being, with both direct and indirect effects on the bottom-line.

B2E has a wealth of Strategy expertise from working many on important and transformational programmes.
